NOW-Better Control of ROOTWORM ON PEANUTS -at low cost

Now—with aldrin—you can stop southern corn rootworms on peanuts before they damage your crops. This powerful worm-killer is ideal for heavy soil where rootworms do the most damage.

Virginia growers prove aldrin boosts peanut yields—A Surry County grower jumped his yield from 1,730 to 2,110 pounds per acre. These 380 extra pounds of better peanuts brought $66 more profit per acre!

A Nansemond County grower used aldrin and got back 973 extra pounds of peanuts per acre from heavy soil. His yield went from 1,617 pounds on untreated land to 2,590 on aldrin-treated land. In dollars, that meant $172 more profit per acre. Just two pounds of aldrin are required per acre and aldrin's cost is only a small fraction of the increased profit it brings!

TWO EASY-WAYS TO APPLY ALDRIN:

1. To get maximum benefits with aldrin, spray before planting or before June 15. After spraying aldrin, harrow the soil.
2. Spray after plants are up, just prior to cultivation. Use any standard spraying equipment—even an ordinary weed-sprayer. The low concentration of aldrin used means no clogging of spray nozzles.

Land treated with aldrin produces a better peanut crop with higher quality. And that, of course, means more profit to you. Ask your county agent about this rootworm-killing insecticide.

Estelene Boutwell-Willie Dean Helms Wed in Impressive Home Ceremony on April 16

The vows were exchanged before an altar improvised in front of the mantle which held a large mirror encircled with white and green. White tapers were used on either end. Tall stands of white gladioli, snapdragons and mums formed the central arrangement. Ferns and anthurus were used for the background.

The bridesmaids were Misses Mildred Head, presented a program of spiritual music. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Dewey Boutwell of Victoria, was given in marriage by her father. CREDIT OFFICE OPEN

James F. Martin, Coffee County representative for the CREDIT Production Credit Association, states that he will be in the Elba office on Fridays and Saturdays of each week. The association, a farmer's co-op that is a part of the Federal Credit System, makes crop, dairy, and beef loans to farmers in the county.

The office for the co-op is located above Bonneau-Jeter Hardware in the office formerly occupied by F. H. Murphy.

Kona Coffee

Kona coffee is good for more than just drinking. Kona coffee introduced in 1929 is a steadily growing industry. Kona farmers in the 1950-51 fiscal year produced an average of 225 pounds of "green" coffee per acre, compared with a world average of 70 to 100 pounds per acre.

All three candidates are well qualified and have many supporters. This three-way race has created unusual interest.

It is predicted by those who are close followers of county politics that a run-off will be necessary to decide the race.

J. Oscar English and James Guy Dyar Fight For Probate Judge

The post of probate judge is being sought by two candidates. Judge J. O. English is seeking a second term and has made an outstanding record in his post as chairman of the Board of County Commissioners. Courtesy and efficiency of his office are two of the main planks in Judge English's platform. A fair and square deal for everyone who has business in the probate office is stressed. This policy has made him a multitude of friends.

Judge English was born and reared in Coffee County and his parents were also life-long residents in the county. He has been active in business, religious, civic, agricultural, educational and public life for many years.

James Guy Dyar is a citizen of Enterprise where he has held responsible positions. Before going to Enterprise he was active in the educational field. His campaign has been particularly aggressive with many appearances at political rallies and at other county events. Friends say he will make a creditable showing in Tuesday's primary.

After that we discussed for a long time whether we would eat the food all in one meal or make it last a week. Finally we compromised and ate chicken for three days.

Years went by slowly, during which time history flew out the window. Everybody was miserable and everybody became a crook. During those years France was divided in three parts. The German collaborators, the anti-Communists and the allied supporters. I realize now that the smartest ones were the anti-Communists. In our party, the allied supporters, we all looked forward to the invasion of the allies and believed it would be the end of the war and finally freedom again. What a mistake we made!

Toward 1944 I made my entry in the black market business and stayed in it until 1948 when I left France for the U. S.

In 1945, my mother and I were living in Revel, a small town about the size of Elba. We were renting a bedroom and bath and taking one meal a day. Our landlord was selling cigarettes at a retail basis. I was selling them wholesale to him and other customers. Those were black-market cigarettes. Our rent was 120 francs a day for each of us and I was selling cigarettes at 120 francs a package.

One day the landlord increased our rent to 125 francs. The next day I sold him cigarettes at 125 francs a package. The rest of my customers had not increased their prices on what I was buying from them so the cigarettes remained 120 francs for them.

Some time later the rent went up to 130—so did the cigarettes. Then the rent became 135 francs then the cigarettes became 135 francs. At that point the rent did not increase anymore. As I was selling him more than 200 francs a day I did not care what he or she was increasing their rent for.

That was a fair deal. Any price control or stabilization could not have improved it. It is the exchange of what one needs against what the other one needs. If some government had stepped in and put a regulation that only one of us could increase his price and not the other one—well, that is what we are having in America right now.

Take for example, the steel industry. The worker and boss are exchanging services. One gives labor, the other money in exchange. If the worker is not giving enough service for the money he is getting, the boss fires him. If the worker is not getting enough money for the services he can quit his job and find another one. Instead of that, he asks the government for help. If he is getting the help, he can quit his job and find another one. Instead of that, he asks the government for help. Three-Way Battle for Supt. of Education Is Hottest County Race

The voters of Coffee County have a full list of candidates to choose from in Tuesday's primary election. Every post to be filled has two or more aspirants and all have made active campaigns.

Hottest race of all is the three-cornered fight for Superintendent of Schools.

Kernit Crook is asking for a second term. He campaigns on the basis of his performance in office the past four years. Facts show that school finances are in good condition. Within the limit allowed by restricted funds improvements have been made.

Superintendent Crook is a World War II veteran and is active in religious, civic, educational and public welfare activities.

Robert Leamon Farris is a member of one of Coffee County's most prominent families and is a native of the county. He has experience in every level of the county educational system. Mr. Farris has taught in the elementary, secondary and high schools of the county. He is presently principal of Zion Chapel school.

C. E. Peacock has served many years in the county school system and is popular in the eastern part of the county. He is presently teaching in the Enterprise schools. His campaigns have been active and he seeks office on the basis of his experience and training in the educational field.

All three candidates are well qualified and have many supporters. This three-way race has created unusual interest.

It is predicted by those who are close followers of county politics that a run-off will be necessary to decide the race.

J. Oscar English and James Guy Dyar Fight For Probate Judge

The post of probate judge is being sought by two candidates. Judge J. O. English is seeking a second term and has made an outstanding record in his post as chairman of the Board of County Commissioners. Courtesy and efficiency of his office are two of the main planks in Judge English's platform. A fair and square deal for everyone who has business in the probate office is stressed. This policy has made him a multitude of friends.

Judge English was born and reared in Coffee County and his parents were also life-long residents in the county. He has been active in business, religious, civic, agricultural, educational and public life for many years.

James Guy Dyar is a citizen of Enterprise where he has held responsible positions. Before going to Enterprise he was active in the educational field. His campaign has been particularly aggressive with many appearances at political rallies and at other county events. Friends say he will make a creditable showing in Tuesday's primary.

After that we discussed for a long time whether we would eat the food all in one meal or make it last a week. Finally we compromised and ate chicken for three days.

Years went by slowly, during which time history flew out the window. Everybody was miserable and everybody became a crook. During those years France was divided in three parts. The German collaborators, the anti-Communists and the allied supporters. I realize now that the smartest ones were the anti-Communists. In our party, the allied supporters, we all looked forward to the invasion of the allies and believed it would be the end of the war and finally freedom again. What a mistake we made!

Toward 1944 I made my entry in the black market business and stayed in it until 1948 when I left France for the U. S.

In 1945, my mother and I were living in Revel, a small town about the size of Elba. We were renting a bedroom and bath and taking one meal a day. Our landlord was selling cigarettes at a retail basis. I was selling them wholesale to him and other customers. Those were black-market cigarettes. Our rent was 120 francs a day for each of us and I was selling cigarettes at 120 francs a package.

One day the landlord increased our rent to 125 francs. The next day I sold him cigarettes at 125 francs a package. The rest of my customers had not increased their prices on what I was buying from them so the cigarettes remained 120 francs for them.

Some time later the rent went up to 130—so did the cigarettes. Then the rent became 135 francs then the cigarettes became 135 francs. At that point the rent did not increase anymore. As I was selling him more than 200 francs a day I did not care what he or she was increasing their rent for.

That was a fair deal. Any price control or stabilization could not have improved it. It is the exchange of what one needs against what the other one needs. If some government had stepped in and put a regulation that only one of us could increase his price and not the other one—well, that is what we are having in America right now.

Take for example, the steel industry. The worker and boss are exchanging services. One gives labor, the other money in exchange. If the worker is not giving enough service for the money he is getting, the boss fires him. If the worker is not getting enough money for the services he can quit his job and find another one. America Is Loosing Freedom The Same Way Europe Did

By Solange J. Cunningham

Editor's Note—Mrs. Cunningham is a French war bride who has been in this country four years. During this time she has seen our government take the same steps that led to the loss of freedom under the German occupation and under the many French governments immediately after the war. Her alarm and the editor's feeling that it is time for us to wake up to the danger of our position are the reasons for this special edition of THE CLIPPER.

Do you think you know what freedom is? You don't. Freedom is like happiness; you only know about it when you have lost it. Then it is too late to get it back. The first signs of loss of freedom are never detected the first time you see them. Realization only comes when freedom is completely lost. I went through it once and I shall never forget it. If I tell you about it, you might be able to recognize these same symptoms in the United States.

Back in 1939, it was quite clear we were going to have a war. Germany kept on invading small countries and such powers as England and France could not let such a crime go unpunished. We had great confidence in our strength, just as great as any American toward the power of the U. S.

Of course, France and England, not to mention the United States, were not going to let a little on the blouse side, I would say. This is quite important because we thought that what happened to the Austrians and Czechs and Poles, could not possibly happen to us. But it did, and what happened to France could happen to any other country. In fact, it would have been the same thing in England if Germany had taken advantage of Danterque instead of being in such a hurry to get to Paris.

I shall always remember the exact words of our prime minister, Daladier, when the war was declared on Germany: "We will win because we are the strongest."

According to news commentators and government authorities the first eight months of war were very successful. Then out of a clear blue sky on May 10 the following year, Germany invaded Holland and Belgium and by June 14 the Germans were in Paris.

That was the complete end of freedom. Marshall Petain took supreme command under the Germans, and the first step was to change the French emblem from "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity" to "Work, Family, Country."

There is no use enumerating the things on which there was restriction, it would be too long. But it will not take long to tell you what we could do. On gasoline and cars, doctors were allowed to take one meal a day. Our landlord was selling cigarettes at a retail basis. I was selling them wholesale to him and other customers. Those were black-market cigarettes. Our rent was 120 francs a day for each of us and I was selling cigarettes at 120 francs a package.
